LEONARDO, THE MYSTERY OF THE LOST PORTRAIT

Salerno, 2008. In this town of Campania region, in Italy, a medieval historian was doing some researches in an ancient aristocratic palace, when he found out an oil painting, depicting a man with beard and a hat. The face was strangely familiar... it was very similar to the portraits of Leonardo Da Vinci.

A deep and innovative study on the painting has been started, adopting advanced techniques that revealed an incredible discovery: it is not only the face of Leonardo, but it might even be a self-portrait signed by the genius Da Vinci himself.

The research has been carried out in several fields (analysis of the table and pigments, radiometric dating, handwriting analysis, etc..), involving prestigious universities and research centers, even the Carabinieri. An innovative technique on digital fingerprint survey, developed by the scientific department of the Italian military corps, revealed another interesting element: on the painting there is the same fingerprint found in Leonardo's painting "Lady with an Ermine".

The "Lucan self -portrait" is considered, by international experts, as one of the most extraordinary discoveries of recent times. In this documentary we reconstruct this exciting journey around the genius of Leonardo, by collecting all the elements and the testimonies of the protagonists who have led the investigations with high professionalism and enthusiasm, thus opening the doors to the fascinating past of the Florentine artist.
